About Mussoorie

Mussoorie was established by the British as a hill station retreat from the heat of the plains. Situated at 6,500 feet, the town runs along a ridge of the Himalayas overlooking the Doon Valley. Mussoorie is a quiet mountainous break from the hectic cities of India and a great place to spend a weekend recharging, hiking, or enjoying local Tibetan cuisine. Do let us know if you will be in the area for an evening or weekend - we're happy recommend cafes, pubs, and local walks.

Seasonal Weather

In monsoon, June to September, Mussoorie is magical - we are literally in the clouds and the forests are lush. Expect travel delays due to fog and bring an umbrella. October-November and March-May are generally great times to visit, with occasional views of the Himalayan range, but do bring layers as Mussoorie is cooler than the plains.

Reaching Mussoorie via Dehradun

The nearest city at the base of our mountains, Dehradun, is easily accessible from Delhi and other cities in India. Bring motion sickness medicine for the winding road to Mussoorie.
